1. Introduction

In 2015, the 2030 Agenda launched Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) 12.3 “by 2030, halve per capita global food waste at the retail and consumer levels and reduce food losses along production and supply chains, including post-harvest losses.” Food waste (FW) prevention and reduction plays a major role in supporting food systems’ sustainability while also contributing to effective Solid Waste Management (SWM), minimizing detrimental environmental, climate change, and socio-economic impacts.

Awareness-raising and capacity development for food supply chain actors, the public sector, and for civil society organizations is required for successful SDG 12.3 interventions. Mapping stakeholders and their potential roles towards prevention and reduction of FW supports a coherent, coordinated, and complementary approach to quantification, causes identification, and scaling up of feasible solutions that bring significant returns on investment.

2. Context

From June 2019 to August 2021, the project Innovative approaches to reduce, recycle and reuse FW in urban Sri Lanka was implemented under the oversight of the Ministry of Urban Development and Housing, in collaboration with the Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) and the International Water Management Institute (IWMI). The project had six working areas (see Figure 1). This report is the deliverable for the 1.3 project component (i.e. stakeholder analysis).

The major output of the project was to facilitate knowledge development for and drafting of the Urban Roadmap on FW Prevention, Reduction, Management in Sri Lanka, that includes a comprehensive Action Plan with Monitoring and Evaluation criteria.

3. Objectives and methodology

The objective of this report is to map<sup>1</sup> state and non-state stakeholders in selected<sup>2</sup> municipalities: Colombo metropolitan area (Colombo, Sri Jayewardenepura-Kotte, Negombo, Kaduwela, and Moratuwa Municipal council areas), Jaffna, Kandy, Batticaloa, Kurunegala and Galle. Stakeholders were grouped in clusters: producers, enterprises/food business operators, private/public/civil society organizations, and households (see Figure 3).

In Sri Lanka, institutions working on food and/or (bio-)waste can be divided into governmental, semi-governmental, private, and non-governmental. These actors cover governance (e.g. policies and regulations), production, trade, input supply, services, welfare support, and research. Their duties and responsibilities are, sometimes, crosscutting and interrelated with overlaps that can lead to poor coordination.

The total FW generated in the country was estimated at 3 963 tons per day (FAO/IWMI, 2021c). The data for Colombo Municipality is presented in Figure 4 while it is compared with the food use-not-waste

4. Overview of the political and administrative system

The institutional framework (see Figure 2) set up for food safety and quality control and waste management in Sri Lanka is under the umbrella of the Central Government, Provincial Council (PC), and Local Authority (LA). The major related central government agencies are the Ministry of Public Services, Provincial Councils and Local Government, the Ministry of Environment, the Ministry of Urban Development and Housing, and the Ministry of Health (MoH), the Ministry of Technology and Research and the Ministry of Trade.

There are several state stakeholders that are relevant to FW prevention and reduction. The role and responsibilities of ministries, line agencies and provincial organizations are summarized in Figure 2. Currently, Sri Lanka faces challenges in MSW management due to gaps in stakeholder participation in the design as well as the implementation and enforcement of measures.<sup>3</sup>

5. Analysis of food production governance and its main stakeholders

The Ministry of Agriculture (MoA) is a key central government ministry responsible for formulating and implementing the national policy related to food production. An array of institutions is engaged with the MoA to strengthen the food production sector in Sri Lanka.<sup>4</sup> The institutions governing food production in Sri Lanka could be categorized based on their mandates dealing with food crops, plantation crops, export agricultural crops (export crops other than tea, rubber, and coconut), livestock and poultry, fishery, and other allied services such as irrigation, agrarian development, and environment. The institutional linkages of the different ministries and agencies are described in Figure 5.

In addition to the agencies described in Figure 5, there are several Provincial Ministries (Agriculture, Irrigation, Environment, Local Government, Health, etc.) and departments, under each Provincial Ministry, handling the devolved function of the agriculture and food production sector.

61 of 1989, Sections 41 and 93 to 95 of the Pradeshiya Saba Act, No. 15 of 1987 are the key pieces of legislation on waste management in Local Authorities (LAs).

The national 2019 overarching agricultural policy (draft, available online<sup>5</sup> highlights that the food production sector has an extended number of institutions with poor inter-institutional coordination owing to the devolution of powers without real decentralization leading to top-down approach in implementation and rent-seeking behavior due to over-regulation. There is an absence of sound coordination for knowledge generation and dissemination between national and provincial systems.

The key functions and mandates of the main governmental institutions dealing with food production are listed and described in ANNEX 1 (roles and mandates of the key government agencies working with food production). The key private sector players and civil society/producers/consumer organizations engaged in food production are listed in ANNEX 2 (private sector players in food production, manufacturing, and marketing). Additionally, ANNEX 3 (major supermarket chains in the country) is presented along with ANNEX 4 on major restaurant chains in the country. There are many NGOs, civil societies, and consumer/trader organizations working in the areas of food production, distribution, and marketing. Some of the main national-level organizations are described in ANNEX 5 on major national level NGOs and civil societies working on food production, distribution, marketing and waste prevention, minimization, and management

The MoA and the allied institutions are mandated to conduct research and technology development while also promoting innovative practices in production. The MoA has a dedicated Institute for Post-Harvest Technologies, aimed at reducing food losses in the value chain (i.e. from production up to but excluding retail) and also a separate division for food research to develop food preservation techniques that would help strengthening value addition, especially for peak production periods.

The Department of Agriculture (DoA) has developed guidelines and good management practices to minimize the food losses. However, there is no law, regulation, or enforcing mechanism with the DoA to for the implementation of the guidelines or prevent noncompliance. The organizations dealing with food production have no mandate or authority to regulate packaging, handling, and transporting. Efforts to reduce the food losses occurring in the transport of perishables with the introduction of plastic crates by the MoA were not successful due to the significant increase in transport cost with the intervention. Retail markets are under the ministry of Trade, while public fairs and open markets are the property of LAs where a considerable amount of FW is occurring. Therefore, a common platform to reduce FW is critically important - with overarching governance that coordinates the activities of different working groups.

A significant amount of FW is generated in schools, universities, hospitals, and institutional canteens. According to an estimate, hospitals generate about 01 to 04 metric tons of FW per day<sup>6</sup>, as patients receive food from the hospital while also receiving food from visitors.

Considerable amounts of FW are occurring in the food services sector and retail markets in the selected urban areas. Interventions targeting FW reduction should focus on supply chain optimization, training of employees, raising awareness and disseminating information for customers, and increasing cooperation with charities and social service organizations for recovery and redistribution of safe and nutritious food for direct human consumption. Businesses have an opportunity, for instance, to utilize the resources allocated for Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) to initiate quantification of FW and stakeholders' mapping.

There are several national-level private sector players engaged in food processing and value addition of fruits and vegetables, dairy, and livestock products (see ANNEX 2). Transferring knowledge on international experiences and best practices to prevent and reduce FW to enhance current capacities would benefit the Sri Lanka in general and the food business sector in particular.

Different types of food-related civil societies and national level NGOs have been functioning in the country, especially for fruits and vegetables, livestock, dairy industries, fishery, bakery products, and food services

(see ANNEX 5). These organizations have a large number of members and sometimes create regional branches throughout the country. These organizations should be an active part, as identified in Sri Lanka's Roadmap and Action Plan on Urban Food Waste Prevention and Reduction for Households, Food services, Retailers, and Wholesalers.

6. State and non-state actors in food and bio-waste management

State actors could create an enabling environment for FW reduction through effective policies, regulatory instruments, and incentives for better bio-waste management, multi-stakeholders action plans, and monitoring and reporting mechanisms for FW data (e.g. from wholesale, storage, processing, distribution, food services, and households).

The diverse roles and responsibilities for food and (bio-)waste related Ministries and Departments are described in ANNEX 6 (role and mandates of central and provincial agencies for (bio-)waste). The function of (bio-)waste management is a responsibility of the Ministry of Local Government and Provincial Councils and relevant LAs which is stipulated in the Municipal Councils Ordinances No.16, Urban Council Ordinance No.61, and Pradeshiya Sabha Act No. 15. Each LA has been given the authority to define the implementation and penalties rules for waste management.

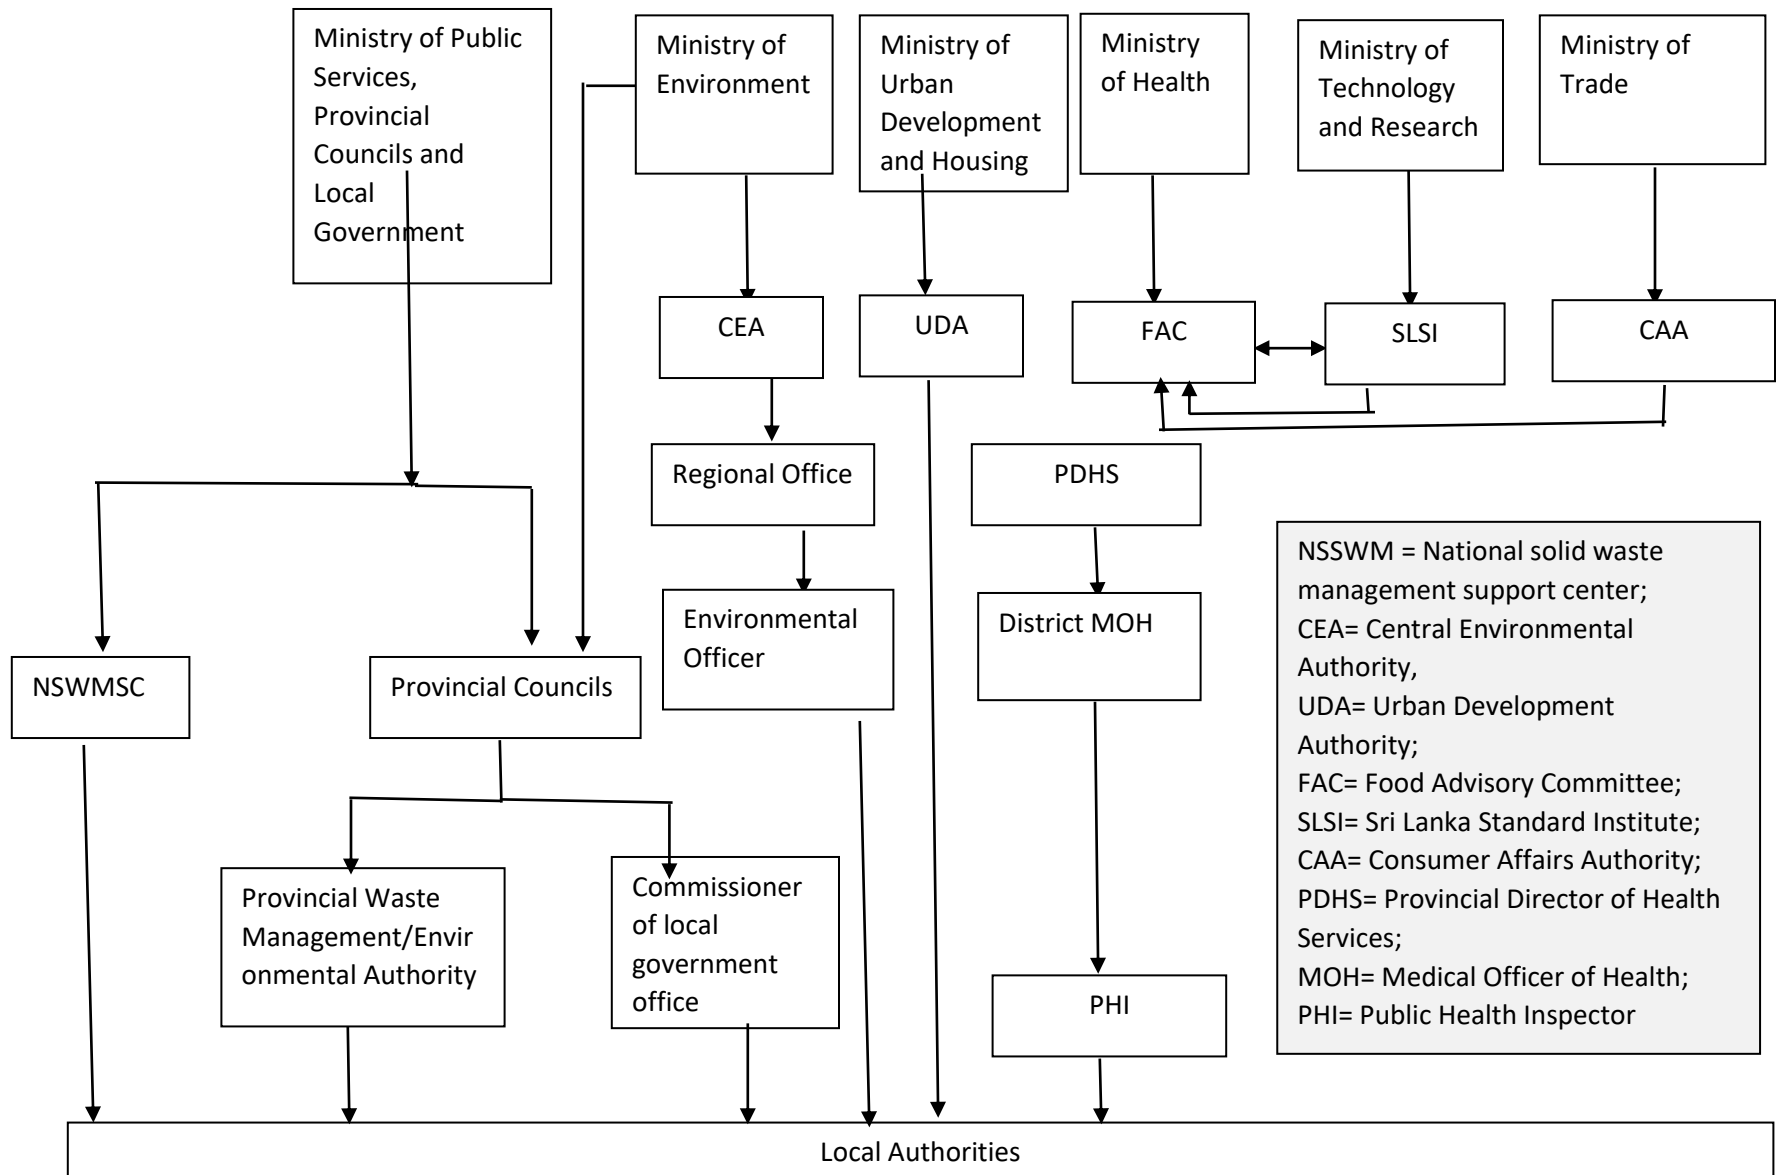

In Sri Lanka, each LA is responsible for the collection and disposal of waste generated by residents and for the development of relevant policies and by-laws that refer to measures related to citizens and businesses. The National Solid Waste Management Support Center was established to provide technical and financial support for LA's to upgrade the waste management system.

Supervision rights over LAs was handed over from the central government to the Provincial Councils (PCs) through the 13th Amendment of the 1987 constitution. Its rights relating to waste management were, accordingly, handed over to the PC in the Provincial Council Act No. 42. Ministry of Environment formulated the National Environmental Act (NEA) No.47 in 1980 aiming to preserve the environment and to prevent pollution. Consequently, the Central Environmental Authority (CEA) was established.

Food safety falls under the mandate of the Food Control Administration Unit (FCAU) with the leadership of the Director-General of Health Services, Ministry of Health who is also the chairperson the Food Advisory Committee (FAC) represented by various stakeholders from government departments/ministries, private sector, and consumer organizations. In addition to the Ministry of Health, other major ministries involved in FAC are the Ministry of Technology and Research, Ministry of Trade, Ministry of Finance (Department of Customs), and Ministry of Agriculture (Livestock).

The institutional linkages between ministries and agencies are illustrated in Figure 6. The current fragmentation leads to duplicated and overlapping functions. In addition to the mapped government agencies, there are universities, research institutes, and NGOs that are keen about food waste prevention and reduction. The government could initiate collaborative research projects with these organizations to generate knowledge that would facilitate behavior change for wholesalers, retailers, food processors, food services, and consumers.

Source: Authors' elaboration

Several private organizations are involved in (bio-)waste management in Sri Lanka. Some of them as the executive body for projects or/and donor organizations, while some are service providers for LAs. The major private sector players in (bio-)waste management, at the moment, are Clean Tech of Abans/Abans Environmental Services PVT Ltd and Care Clean. They are providing services in solid waste collection and transport. Connections are established with piggery farmers to provide former foodstuffs to be utilized as feed from hotels and restaurants – to reduce transport cost of biowaste going to landfill sites.

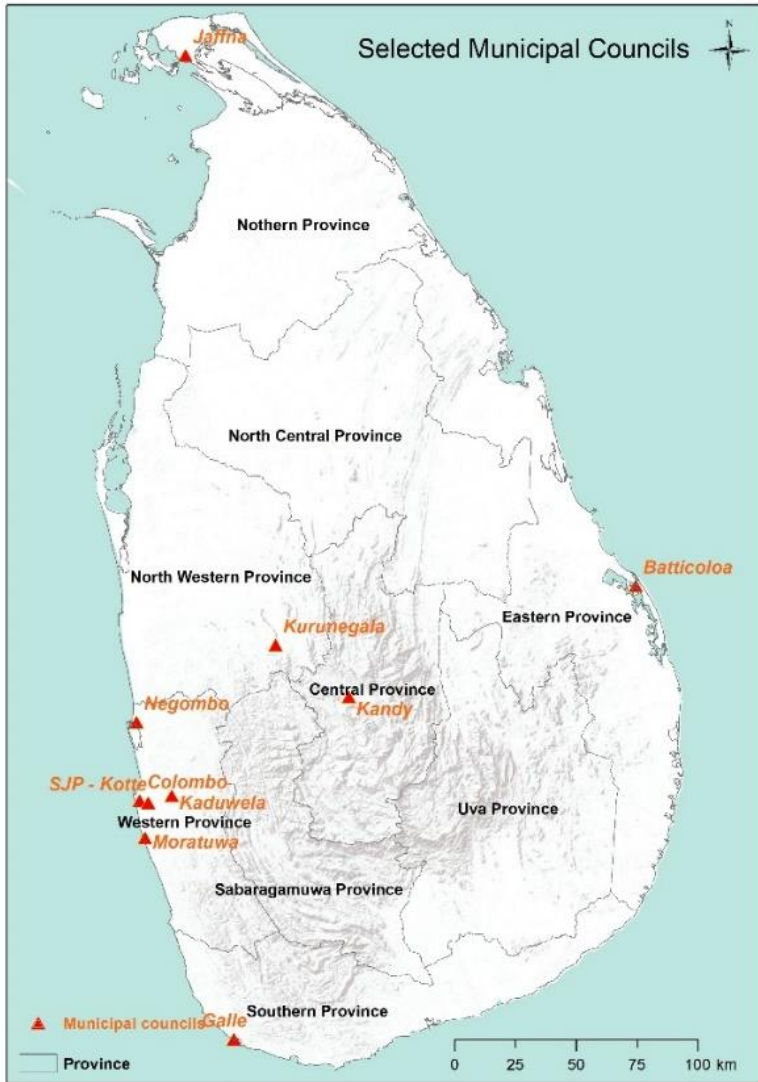

Additionally, there is also the commercial company Carekleen Services active in cleaning services for offices, while also working on solid waste management. However, due accessibility and logistics challenges, the private sector involvement in waste management is slowly reducing (Basnayake and Viswanathan, 2014).

The private sector interest in projects on waste to energy started recently. For example, Biogreen cycle Pvt. Ltd is providing services to the projects related to recovery of energy from waste through a variety of processes, including combustion, gasification, pyrolyzation, anaerobic digestion, and landfill gas (LFG) recovery. Nevertheless, prevention of FW at source has demonstrated high returns on investment. Current FW management, once the resource becomes waste, should be balanced with reduction efforts.

7. Stakeholder analysis in selected Municipality Council areas

Colombo Municipal Council (CMC) was established in 1865 and it is one of the oldest Municipalities in South Asia. In addition to the resident population in Colombo, there is an estimated floating population of nearly 500,000. Out of the selected areas, Colombo, Sri Jayewardenepura-Kotte, Kaduwela, Moratuwa and Negombo are in the Colombo Megapolis area and others located in other provinces. Colombo registers a higher male to female ratio compared with the other urban areas analysed. The major demographic features of the selected municipality areas are described in ANNEX 7. The locations of the selected sites are illustrated in Figure 7.

7.1 Colombo Municipality

Colombo is the commercial capital of the country and place to key economic infrastructures. Colombo Municipal Council (CMC) was established in 1865 and it is one of the oldest Municipalities in South Asia. The CMC covers Colombo and Thimbirigasyaya Divisional Secretariat Divisions.

There are about 697 private food service entities (eg. hotels, restaurants, and caterers) registered with CMC, excluding star grade hotels. The number of star hotels exceeds 100 within the city limits. The city has the largest wholesale fruits and vegetable market of the country (i.e. Colombo Manning Market) and more than 10 public retail markets provide a regular supply of perishables and other food items to the city dwellers. The city has a current network of supermarkets consisting of nine Keells supermarket, 22 Cargills

Food Cities, four Arpico Super Centers, and five Laugfs Super Marts. The dedicated economic center in Narahenpita is another popular retail market.

The estimated amount of food waste generated in CMC area in 2017 was 353 t/day, which is half of the total waste generated in this geographical area. Waste analysis done for the segregated waste collected by the CMC primarily consisted of household food waste, followed by 110 t/day from food services, 25 t/day from markets, and 9 t/day from slaughterhouses and meat shops (FAO, IWMI, and RUAFA, 2018). Therefore, food services are a major group of food waste generators.

ANNEXES 8 - 12 describe the major stakeholders under different categories (e.g. traders, charities, retailers, service providers, regulatory actors), in Colombo city who could contribute to FW prevention, reduction, and recycling.

7.2 Sri Jayewardenepura - Kotte Municipality

Sri Jayewardenepura - Kotte (commonly known as Kotte) is the official administrative capital of Sri Lanka, located in the southwestern part of the country, about 8 km southeast of the commercial capital of Colombo. The city is one of the planned urban sites with government offices and residential buildings. The Parliament of Sri Lanka and the University of Sri Jayewardenepura are located within the city.

The major identified stakeholders linked with FW generation, management, and regulations are listed in ANNEXES 13 - 15. In addition to listed supermarkets, the city area has ten Keells Super, 12 Cargills Food City, four Laugfs Super Mart and two Arpico Super Centers.

7.3 Kaduwela Municipal Council

Kaduwela Municipality is a growing peri-urban city near Colombo. It is located about 16 km from Colombo city center on the Colombo - Avissawella old road. The city area hosts several key Ministries and International organizations such as the International Water Management Institute and the Overseas School of Colombo. Several major supermarkets have opened the branches in the area including 11 Cargills Food city branches, six Keells super outlets, two Laugfs Super Marts, and three Arpico Supercenters.

An analysis of the sectoral contribution of FW in Kaduwela Municipal Council (MC) showed that supermarkets and vegetable fairs/markets account for the highest FW generation followed by hotels and restaurants sector. Typically, the foodservice sector is expected to contribute with the highest amounts of FW. However, in this case, a considerable amount of former foodstuffs generated in hotels and restaurants are diverted to piggery farmers without going to municipal solid waste collection system (Jayathilake et al, 2021). Therefore, the actual FW generated by hotels and restaurants, in this area, is underestimated. The list of stakeholders belongs to various categories associated with FW generation, regulation and management are given in ANNEXES 16 - 19.

7.4 Moratuwa Municipal Council

Moratuwa is an area having the second-highest population density in the Colombo metropolitan region. Moratuwa is a large suburb of Colombo city, on the southwestern coast of Sri Lanka, near Dehiwala-Mount Lavinia. It is situated on the Galle-Colombo (Galle road) main highway, 18 km south of Colombo city center.

According to UN-Habitat (2002), the city is important due to various factors namely it is a town with some modern industrial activities, traditional carpentry workshops and timber industry, fisheries activities, educational and religious centers of a higher order, service activities particularly related to tourists and industry and Residential suburbs of Colombo.

Moratuwa Municipal Council collects around 124.5 tons of solid waste per day that included 66.8 tons of residential waste, 10 tons of hotel and restaurant waste, 24 tons from markets. Waste composition analysis conducted at the disposal site shows that 52.5% of the waste is kitchen waste (JICA,2016). The major food waste generator in the area is households followed by markets and hotels and restaurants.

The city accommodates 23 primary schools, 07 secondary schools, 02 national schools, 02 private schools and 04 international schools. There are several major supermarkets in the area including seven branches of Cargills food city, three branches of Keells Super, and one Arpico Supercenter and Laugf Super Mart, and eight public markets. The key stakeholders associated with food waste generation and management are listed in ANNEXES 20 - 22 that cover major private actors, service providing institutions – public and private, regulatory actors and other government organizations responsible for food waste generation and management respectively.

7.5 Negombo Municipal Council

Negombo is a city on the west coast of the country and at the shore of Negombo lagoon, close to Colombo International airport. Negombo is one of the fastest-growing tourist destinations in Sri Lanka and it is experiencing a rapid increase in waste generation. The daily waste generation is 157.68 tons and data on solid waste indicates 100.77 tons of residential waste, 14.23 tons of hotels and restaurant waste, and 14.99 tons of markets, daily fairs, fruits/vegetables retail stalls and fish/meat stalls waste (Karunaratna et al., 2019). Hotel waste generation increases by 50-200% during the peak tourist seasons (November to April) and for special events (weddings and parties). Out of the daily collected bio-waste, 10 tons is used for compost-making at the Municipal compost plant. The remaining quantity is currently disposed of at Ovitiyawatta open dumping site (Negombo Municipal Council, 2019). Approximately 1-2 tons of former foodstuffs are collected by private traders to sell as animal feed for piggery farmers (Karunaratna et al., 2019).

Negombo has a large number of star grade hotels and guest houses. The area has branches of several major supermarkets including nine branches of Cargills food city, four branches of Keells Super, one Arpico Super Centre and one Laugf Super Mart. Households are the dominant FW generators followed by markets, hotels, and restaurants respectively. The major stakeholders associated with FW generation and potential role in FW reduction and management are listed in ANNEXES 23 - 26: major private actors, service providing institutions – public and private, regulatory actors and other government responsible for FW generation and management, and major traders organizations, respectively.

7.6 Kandy Municipal Council

Kandy is the capital city of the Hill Country. It is a UNESCO heritage city with a high level of tourist attractions. The Municipality area has a population of 98,828 as per the 2012 census, but the city also serves an additional urban fringe population of 116 000 (SLILG, 2018). Kandy registers the highest share of in-migrants as a proportion of the total population (SLILG, 2018).

According to the registration records of the Kandy Municipal Council (KMC), the area consists of over 330 hotels, restaurants, and caterers excluding star hotels. Total numbers of hotels, including star grade hotels within the Kandy city center, is 96. There are 84 government offices, 33 Schools and 4 hospitals in the KMC area with cafeteria facilities. In addition to 33 supermarkets in the city, numbers of registered vegetables, fruits, fish, and meat stalls are 34, 15, 14 and 29 respectively. The supermarkets include three numbers of Cargills food City, two numbers of Keells Super, One Arpico Super Center, and one Laugf Super Mart.

The total waste generated in the Kandy municipality area was 127 tons per day in 2016 (Karunaratna et al., 2019). According to a waste assessment conducted in 2007, the solid waste generated consisted of 59.2% of FW (Menikpura et al, 2007). However, waste composition analysis done by JICA (2003), shows that the waste consisted of on average 58.2 % of kitchen waste that included 77.11 % of residential kitchen waste and 79.67 % of market waste. Dissanayake (2013) also found similar findings and reports that residential waste in the Kandy landfill consisted of 78.3% kitchen waste. Kandy Teaching Hospital alone generates 4 tons of FW per day (Sujeewa Fernando, Ministry of Environment, personal communication, August 2020). ANNEXES 27 - 30 indicate the main stakeholders representing different groups who have a potential role to play in FW reduction: major private actors, service providing institutions – public and private, regulatory actors and other government organizations responsible for food waste generation and management, main charities, consumer organizations and NGOs related to food waste management, respectively.

7.7 Galle Municipality

Galle is the capital city of Southern Province. The city is a UNESCO heritage city with significant tourism attractions. The average waste generation rate of Galle MC area is 0.28kg/capita/day (i.e. 50.9 tons of waste/day). Out of the total waste generated, 80% is disposed of in an open dumpsite. Households, food business operators, and institutions are the biggest waste generators in Galle, but the contribution from households is the highest (i.e. 51%). The results of waste analysis show that household waste consisted of 68.1 % of kitchen waste and food business operators waste (i.e. hotels and restaurants) with 70-76 % of kitchen waste. (Balasooriya et al., 2015)

The city area has more than 350 registered hotels, restaurants, guest houses and caterers excluding star grade hotels. The major supermarkets in the city are three branches of Cargills Food City, two branches of Keells Super, and one branch of Arpico Supercenter. The estimated population in 2017 is 104,000, but the Municipal Council serves an additional fringe population of 263 000 (SLILG, 2018). It has been reported that Galle city has the lowest working-age population out of the nine provincial capital cities (SLILG, 2018).

ANNEXES 31 – 34 indicate the main stakeholders representing different groups who have a potential role to play in FW reduction: major private actors, service providing institutions – public and private, regulatory actors and other government organizations responsible for food waste generation and management, main charities, consumer organizations and NGOs related to food waste management, respectively.

7.8 Jaffna Municipality

Jaffna is the Northern Capital of the Country. The city is a historical colonial port city. Jaffna's economy is mainly driven by the service economy (SLILG, 2018). The amount of solid waste generated is 104.87 tons per day and the waste generation rate is 1.297 kg/person/day (JICA, 2016). The results of the waste analysis show that the collected solid waste consisted of 68.9% kitchen waste. According to JICA (2016) Jaffna MC has not implemented any program in an organized manner to reduce, overall, the generation of organic waste nor FW.

The Municipality area has 88 registered hotels, restaurants, eateries, and caterers and 7 numbers of star grade hotels. Numbers of schools with catering facilities is around 17 and also have three degree offering higher educational institutes. The major supermarkets available within the Jaffna Municipality area are three branches of Cargills Food city, and one branch of Arpico Super center. ANNEXES 35 - 38 indicate the main stakeholders representing different groups who have a potential role to play in FW reduction: major private actors, service providing institutions – public and private, regulatory actors and other government organizations responsible for food waste generation and management, main charities, consumer organizations and NGOs related to food waste management, respectively.

7.9 Kurunegala Municipality

Kurunegala is the provincial capital city of North-Western Province. The city provides a good example of ribbon development progressing into urban sprawl. The economy of the city is based on industrial and service sectors. Kurunegala city has the highest level of tertiary education attainment compared to other provincial capital cities (SLILG, 2018). The large number of service-oriented institutions and higher education centers located within the boundaries of Kurunegala MC serve a floating population of about 250 000. According to the Solid Waste Management Action plan of 2008 (JICA, 2016), the total waste generated in the Kurunegala MC area is 48 tons/day, including 2.46 tons of waste generated from hotels and restaurants. Overall, the total waste consisted of 52% of kitchen waste.

The supermarket list excludes the major supermarkets including two Cargills Food city outlets, one each of Keells Super, Laugf Super Mart and Arpico Super Centre.

ANNEXES 39 - 41 indicate the main stakeholders representing different groups who have a potential role to play in FW reduction: major private actors, service providing institutions – public and private, regulatory actors and other government organizations responsible for food waste generation and management, main charities, consumer organizations and NGOs related to food waste management, respectively.

7.10 Batticaloa Municipality

Batticaloa is an eastern coastal town surrounded by the Indian Ocean and Batticaloa lagoon. The quantity of waste generated in the Batticaloa MC area is 52.5 tons per day (Otoo et al., 2016) in which 57% is organic waste (Bandara, 2011). Out of the total waste collected, 12 tons of waste is segregated at source. The segregated waste consists of 8% of food and market waste. Households are the major waste generators in Batticaloa followed by markets, hotels, restaurants, institutions (e.g. hospitals, universities) and commercial entities.

The MC area consisted of 23 721 households, five markets, one slaughterhouse, 55 hotels and restaurants, three hospitals, and 44 commercial and institutional establishments (Otoo et al., 2016). Waste analysis done for the collected household waste indicates that FW generation is the highest category of waste from the total waste generated at household level amounting to 3.4 tons per day. The study further reveals that every person generates 260g of FW per day and FW contributes nearly 88% of the total waste generated by the households in the study area (Sivakumar and Sugitharan, 2010).

The area has the highest poverty headcount index out of all selected municipalities given in Table 7. In addition to the resident population of 86 200, there is a floating population of around 3 000 that is daily coming to Batticaloa town for their work.

ANNEXES 42 - 45 indicate the main stakeholders representing different groups who have a potential role to play in FW reduction: major private actors, service providing institutions – public and private, regulatory actors and other government organizations responsible for food waste generation and management, main charities, consumer organizations and NGOs related to food waste management, respectively.

8. Concluding remarks

There is a large array of institutions in the country, starting from food production to consumer affairs, that are performing their duties throughout the food consumption, production, and supply chain. The report highlights a lack of coordination that leads to a duplication of tasks and a risk of not realizing the full potential of complementarities in the efforts to prevent and reduce FW. There is a need for a common platform on the topic.

Most state entities seldom work closely with non-state stakeholders, including grass-root organizations. Currently there is no mechanism to implement or enforce provisions made through a large number of legislations and policies that are linked with FW prevention and reduction.

Most institutions involved in waste management are not fully aware of or concerned about the importance of FW reduction and do not yet have sufficient budgetary allocation to start investments that would lead to significant socio-economic and environmental returns.

LAs, as the actors responsible for handling and managing waste, are currently involved in recovering nutrients and resources from former foodstuffs (i.e. through animal feed) and food waste (i.e. through compost). The private sector and civil society organizations launched initiatives on redistribution and recovery of safe and nutritious food for direct human consumption. However, the lack of official legal and operational guidelines for redistribution and recovery of safe and nutritious food for direct human consumption as well as for utilization of former foodstuffs for animal feed, combined with a gap in enforcement and monitoring is highlighted.

The country's institutional framework should focus on creating awareness among the stakeholders involved in both food production and FW prevention and reduction. Building capacities of all state and non-state stakeholders is a timely to effectively implement win-win strategies that lead to significant returns on investment. The Sri Lanka's Roadmap and Action Plan on Urban Food Waste Prevention and Reduction for Households, Food services, Retailers, and Wholesale offers the starting point towards reaching SDG 12.3.
